Proceedings of the 1993 Academy of Marketing Science (AMS) Annual Conference

Loyalty is one of the main assets of a brand. In today's markets, achieving and maintaining loyal customers has become an increasingly complex challenge for brands due to the widespread acceptance and adoption of diverse technologies by which customers communicate with brands. Customers use different channels (physical, web, apps, social media) to seek information about a brand, communicate with it, chat about the brand and purchase its products. Firms are thus continuously changing and adapting their processes to provide customers with agile communication channels and coherent, integrated brand experiences through the different channels in which customers are present. In this context, understanding how brand management can improve value co-creation and multichannel experience—among other issues—and contribute to improving a brand's portfolio of loyal customers constitutes an area of special interest for academics and marketing professionals. This Special Issue explores new areas of customer loyalty and brand management, providing new insights into the field. Both concepts have evolved over the last decade to encompass such concepts and practices as brand image, experiences, multichannel context, multimedia platforms and value co-creation, as well as relational variables such as trust, engagement and identification (among others).

Management Retail

Talks about the field of International Marketing. This title includes coverage of technology's impact on the international market arena and a comprehensive website, helping to provide updates to text content in this continually changing field.

Marketing Management

Market Response and Marketing Mix Models takes a forward-looking perspective identifying research opportunities related to market response and marketing mix models falling under four broad areas: - "New" or under-studied inputs and/or "richer" measures of inputs constructs. - Explicitly accounting for the process linking inputs to outputs - "New" or under-studied dependent variables - Under-studied or emerging contexts. Each section covers three broad areas related to marketing mix models - data issues and requirements, methodologies (i.e., traditional econometrics; Bayesian methods; structural models), and substantive findings. As quantitative information about markets and marketing actions has become widely available, modern marketing is presented with both a challenge and an opportunity: how to analyze this information accurately and efficiently, and how to use it to enhance marketing productivity. Market Response and Marketing Mix Models describes the tools needed for achieving these objectives.
